Shimoga.

Sir,

I have the honor to state that a portion of the old village of Avinahalli in the Sagar Taluk having been destroyed by fire some time back, a Veerabhadra Temple which was in the street was allowed to go to ruins by degrees. The villagers now intend building another temple on the new village site at a cost of about Rs 1000 and establish a new God, the old one having been damaged. There are some old materials, such as stones belonging to the old temple which the villagers propose to make use of for the new one.

2 The temple enjoys Jodi Inam land assessed at Rs 13 and the whole village community have unanimously agreed to have the temple in the new village. As the old village site is at some distance from the present village, it will be inconvenient if the temple is rebuilt on the old site. As the villagers bear the whole cost of the building with an additional Choultry for the use of travellers permission of Government on the Muzrai Department may be obtained for the transfer of the temple to the new village.
